Today cars have become very common. Almost every family has one car. Some even have two or more. But cars weren't so popular at the beginning. They were too expensive for common families to afford. In 1903, Henry Ford opened the Ford Motor Company in Detroit, Michigan. He invented a new way to make cars. That is mass production. That way he could make cars quickly and cheaply. Ford called his cars "the Model T," and he sold more than fifteen million cars in 18 years. It was a big success, and more and more car makers used his ways to build cars. Although Henry Ford wasn't the first man to build the car however he was the one of the pioneers who helped the USA become a nation of cars.
