As a Chinese saying goes, "Helping others is a source of happiness." By helping others, we can feel happy and even build good friendships with them. When we help more people, we'll make more friends. Here is a true story of my own. A few months ago, I saw a foreigner with a map in her hands when I was waiting for the bus. It was raining heavily. She didn't have an umbrella and was all wet. She looked worried and tried to ask two students for directions, but they all ran away. I walked over and talked to her even though my English was poor at that time. Because of my help, she got to the train station in time. When she left, I also gave her my coat to keep her warm. Later, this American girl became my good friend. Now, we keep in touch by e-mail every week. And I'll go to the USA to visit her during the Christmas holidays. I can't wait to see beautiful snow and go skiing with her. Helping others really makes us live a happy life, right?
