And when they came to visit him, he ate them up one by one.

The fox came too, but he was very cautious about it. Standing outside of the cave, he asked politely about the lion's health. The lion replied that he was very sick, and asked the fox to walk inside. But the fox wisely stayed outside and said "I should be glad to do so." But, Mr. Lion, that is strange. There are footprints leading inside, but none going outside. How do your visitors find their way out?" The old lion couldn't say a word.
