【 III 】

In Cappadocia, Turkey, there are 200 ancient cities under the ground. Some cities are three thousand years old. There are passages between the cities, and people can use them to go to other cities. Some passages are many kilometers long.

In the underground cities, there were kitchens, shops, churches, and schools. People kept animals and food in those cities. Three thousand years ago, people were afraid of the cold winters and the wild animals on the ground. Also, people were afraid of the Romans, and the cities were good places to hide.

Maybe it wasn't fun living in the dark places. There wasn't any electricity and there weren't any sports fields, movie theaters or interesting places to go. But today, Cappadocia is a good place to visit.
