五、閱讀測驗：每題 2 分，共 10 分

A very small animal lives in the rainforest of South America. It is only 5 cm long. It is a beautiful golden-yellow frog. This small frog is the most deadly animal in the forest. Its wet skin oozes poison. One drop of this poison can kill a man.

The golden-yellow frog lives only in Colombia. Its name in Spanish means "terrible." It is a poison dart frog. There are 140 kinds of poison dart frogs in the rainforest. They come in many bright colors, from red to blue to orange. The poison of these small frogs keeps them from other animals. Although birds or snakes could eat them up in one bite, they do not because the bright colors mean danger to them.

Actually, the poison is useful to humans. Natives of the rainforest put their darts in the frog's poison. They hold down a frog with a stick. They rub a dart across the frog's back. Then they shoot their darts from blowguns. Only one dart can kill monkeys or even tigers. In fact, one dart with the poison of the golden-yellow dart frog can kill 20,000 mice. That makes this beautiful frog the terror of the rainforest.
